News and Views From The CAPITAL of ARIZONA

A decision handed down by the Arizona supreme court not only settles the prolonged dispute which has affected the state's finances since the adjournment of the legislature last spring but sets many important precedents to guide the legislature, governor and auditor in the future.

The claims which Auditor J. C. Callaghan has been holding up pending a definition of the status of the general appropriation bill by the supreme court, are ordered paid. The adjutant general's department (including the National Guard), board of control, incorporation department of the corporation commission, and the tax commission are the branches of the state government which were most vitally affected by the dispute.

On the Arizona statute books are a number of appropriations for various departments which continue from year to year until repealed. The legislature in drawing a general appropriation bill, attempted to provide for every department. In providing for each department which had a continuing appropriation the legislature added a clause to repeal that appropriation. The governor vetoed a number of sections in their entirety, which he had an unquestioned right to do under the state constitution, but attempted to veto only the repealing clauses attached to others. One of Callaghan's contentions was that the governor had no right to veto merely a part of a section.

Suit was brought in the name of Jesse L. Boyce, secretary of the tax commission, to compel Callaghan to issue the warrants he was withholding. Superior Judge R. C. Stanford, of Maricopa county, issued a writ of mandamus but Callaghan appealed to the supreme court. The supreme court modified and affirmed Stanford's decision, changing it in no essentials.

It is held that the governor did not have the authority to veto the repealing clauses without vetoing the entire sections to which they were attached. But the court also held that the repealing clauses had no place in a general appropriation bill and were illegal.

Part of the decision defines the auditor's duties. To audit, according to the court, means to verify. Whenever a claim, legal under some statute, is presented, it is the auditor's duty to issue a warrant, regardless of whether the legislature has made an appropriation for that particular purpose. It is strongly intimated that it is for the treasurer to say, after warrants reach him, whether there is any money in the state treasury for their payment.

Justice D. L. Cunningham wrote the decision, with Justices H. D. Ross and Alfred Franklin concurring.

Warrants are now being issued to some 500 National Guardsmen who attended the annual encampment last summer and later did strike duty at Clifton. The auditor had also been refusing to issue warrants for the pay of the governor's chauffeur or for the maintenance of the governor's car.

With a force of fifty deputies, U. S. Marshal Joe Dillon is now in the Clifton-Morenci-Metacalf district posting notices and serving papers on union officials and strike leaders. In compliance with an injunction granted by Judge William H. Sawtelle in the federal court at Tucson, the injunction restrains the Western Federation of Miners locals in the Greenlee strike zone from interfering with the performance of annual assessment work on the Detroit Copper company's outlying unpatented claims.

At the opening of the hearing Attorney L. Kearney, representing the unions, filed a general demurrer stating that the company would not lose title to its claims if prevented by force from doing assessment work. He also contended that the Detroit company could not legally apply to the court for an injunction until some overt act of violence had been committed in order to prevent the assessment work being done. Attorneys E. E. Ellinwood and John Mason Ross, for the company, argued that under the circumstances existing in the strike district there was every reason to anticipate trouble and that it was not necessary for the court to wait for some overt act before taking action. Judge Sawtelle overruled the demurrer and, after some testimony had been introduced, issued the writ.

One of the witnesses was James G. Cash, sheriff of Greenlee county, who predicted that there would be trouble if the company attempted to send men from Duncan to do its assessment work. He contended that there were responsible contractors in the district who would undertake the work but was unable to name any.

Affidavits were introduced by the company to prove that men sent to Morenci to do assessment work had been actually interfered with. The company planned to send between 300 and 400 men from the Duncan refugee camp to Morenci to complete the necessary assessment work before January 1.

Carrying out instructions embodied in a resolution passed at the annual meeting of the Arizona Bankers' association, M. B. Hazeltine, president of the organization, has appointed an agricultural committee. The committee is instructed to co-operate with the agricultural extension service of the University of Arizona in the furtherance of improved methods of agriculture and the betterment of rural life. The committee is made up of the following well known bankers: N. D. Sanders, J. J. Gillen, Phoenix; D. J. Thomas, Holbrook; Tenny Williams, Tucson; Lerol C. Snow, Thatcher; the place on the Live Stock Sanitary board left vacant when R. G. Brady, of Tucson, resigned. Mr. Harmon owns many cattle in Yavapai county.

H. B. 5779, introduced by Congressman Carl Hayden, appropriates $50,000 for the establishment of a government fish hatchery somewhere in Arizona. Last spring the legislature passed a bill giving the government authority to establish such a hatchery in any Arizona stream.

The Phoenix Chamber of Commerce is to issue a call for a conference of representatives of Arizona commercial bodies for the purpose of discussing the maintenance of a permanent state exhibit at the San Diego exposition. The conference is to be held in Phoenix early in January.

Under an order of the corporation commission, all railroads doing business in Arizona are required to furnish before February 15 all data regarding their passenger business during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915. On March 1 a hearing will be held and subsequently the commission will decide if an order fixing the maximum passenger fare at three cents a mile, shall be issued.

Pierce W. Butler, generally known as Ben Butler, died suddenly at his home in Phoenix, of Bright's disease. He was 64 years old and a native of Ireland. He arrived in Phoenix 35 years ago and engaged in the restaurant business. Subsequently he became interested in the liquor business, which he conducted on the plane of honesty and fairness which won for him the respect of all; even the most earnest temperance workers always had a good word for Ben Butler. At the time of his death he was the owner of much property in Phoenix.
